

A system and method for monitoring a service transaction are disclosed. A client communicates through a communication channel. Feedback is gathered from the client through the communication channel. The feedback describes an agent and an interaction associated with the agent, and is stored in a client response database.